

What do young men really need to know?

- ✓ Long term relationships will be harder than you imagine, and more worthwhile than you imagine. Don't be surprised by hard times and issues – they make you stronger in the long run.
- ✓ Most men really don't understand how women think. Often you won't realize that you are coming across as insensitive or uncaring, and you need to let her know that you just doesn't understand her.
- ✓ Great skills for long term relationships must be learnt – nobody is born with these skills and we can't learn them from movies. Every man needs other men around him who will lead him, mentor him and tell him (on occasion) when he's making dumb choices. This is especially important if your own parents had a bad marriage, because you learnt most of your relationship skills from watching them.
- ✓ The first few years are one of the toughest times in a long term relationship. Many couples think there must be something wrong with them because in the early stages they disagree about so many things. Don't quit – hang in there – because this is normal.
- ✓ Men prefer to talk while doing things – you're more likely to enjoy talking over the dishes than over a coffee. Explain this to her.
- ✓ There are good times and bad times in every long term relationship. 'Happily ever after' only happens in fairytales. There's always going to be difficult seasons, but every tough season will pass if you work through things.
- ✓ She wants you to listen. She doesn't want you to fix her dramas. She feels great when she can tell you about her problems. Don't ruin it for her by giving her solutions. Don't wait for her to 'get to the point' – the point is just to talk out what's happening in her head.
